

Navigating Chicago

The 2016 ACTStat Networking Dinner will be at The Parthenon (314 S. Halsted), part of Greektown, located in Chicago's West Loop neighborhood. This is a great opportunity to get away from the downtown hotel district and visit one of Chicago's most well-known neighborhoods. Transportation options are listed below:

Car

Taxi. It's a short cab ride from the Hilton to Greektown – about 10-15 minutes, depending on traffic, and about $10-$15. Cabs back to the hotels are plentiful.

Uber. You can download the Uber app, or create an account at <https://get.uber.com/>. If going from the hotel to the restaurant with a group of people, requesting an Uber XL is a cost effective way to go.

Public Transit

Bus. The #126 (in downtown you can catch west bound on Adams) and the #20 (running west bound on Madison) both stop at Halsted.

"L" Train. Take the blue line headed to UIC and/or Forest Park (not in the direction of O'Hare), and get off at Halsted. Walk north.

Active Transport

Walk. Greektown is about a 40-50 minute walk from Michigan Ave/Millennium Park. From the park, walk west on Jackson, Adams, Monroe or Madison. You'll cross the river then the freeway. Halsted is the street immediately after the freeway.

Bike. Divvy Bike is Chicago's bike-share system (www.divvybike.com). If you have steely nerves and don't mind riding in traffic (and maybe happen to have packed a helmet), this is a speedy option. There aren't great bike lanes heading out of downtown, unfortunately, but Washington has a nice inbound lane. There is a station at Michigan and Congress, near the Hilton, and at Peoria and Jackson near the restaurant.
